

GMR dips into the vaults once again to give you a sonic delight from the past – The Hitmen starring in SMASHFACE!

Originally released in 1990, The Hitmen were no-hit wonders; they were obscure in 1990 and totally forgotten by 2010. None of that dilutes the magnificence of SMASHFACE. Its brilliance lies in its artful precision as well as its raw eclecticism. This is the evidence and you are the witnesses: The Hitmen had their shining moment and made their one great record.

SMASHFACE was remastered by original producer Tom Dyer, with the inclusion of the previously unreleased Instrumental (which, of course, is not an instrumental) and their single Perfect Pain (a song about venereal disease)/Tiger Carpet (“It’s from India –let’s go to the pub!”).

The Hitmen are/were: Mark “Arnie” Palmer – Lead Vocal & R. Guitar; Joe Leonard – L. Guitar, Keyboards, Backing Vocal; Dan Swank – Bass, Backing Vocal; Bill Bowman – Drums, Backing Vocal.

What did the Press say back the first time around?

“This is Green Monkey’s best album so far ...the band walks the knife-edge between brains and balls. The Hitmen are something Seattle needs: a rock band with subtlety and intelligence, refreshing in our morass of bludgeoning obviousness.” - Backlash

About Tiger Carpet: “A one-hit wonder for our own times: I mean how could coolness this wacky be sustained?” - Swellesville
